A BCBT JOURNAL

CONTEMPORARY SURGERY

GUIDELINES FOR AUTHORS

CONTEMPORARY SURGERY publishes clinical articles on the practice of surgery and related topics to the benefit of its readers — practitioners in the fields of general, cardiovascular, thoracic, pediatric, trauma, and colon and rectal surgery, urology, oncology, infectious diseases, critical care, and nutrition.The goal of CONTEMPORARY SURGERY is to serve the surgeon in practice, and authors are asked to reflect this in their manuscripts. Only original material, not submitted elsewhere, is acceptable.

Format. The range of subject matter includes technique and rationale, review articles, case studies, history of surgery, and others. A symposium is offered as a special feature in each edition.

All manuscripts undergo peer review. Acceptance or rejection of a manuscript is based on suitability of the topic, technical accuracy, and clarity of presentation. Only original papers not previously submitted to or published by other journals are accepted for peer review.

Illustrations. All types of artwork may be submitted, including four-color illustrations. Artwork will be published at the discretion of the editor.

For best printing quality, color illustrations should be submitted as 35mm slides, black and white illustrations as glossy prints. On the reverse side of each illustration, or on the front of slide mount, indicate top, figure number, and contributor's name. Do not mount illustrations on paper or place paper clips on glossy prints. Submit legend for each illustration. Tables should have headings and be listed by Roman numerals. All illustrations will be returned to the author after publication of the article.

A letter of permission must accompany all photographs of identifiable patients and all illustrations previously published.

Manuscript preparation. Send two copies of the manuscript. A letter relinquishing copyright and certifying that the article is original material should accompany the manuscript. Please designate one author for correspondence and indicate mailing address and telephone number. Title page should include degrees, academic title or staff position of each author, name of institution at which work was done, and, if appropriate, acknowledgments. An abstract, typed on a separate sheet, must accompany the paper, followed by introduction, materials and methods, results, discussion, conclusion, references, and legends.

References should be cited in the text by numerical sequence in order of appearance; 25 references are permitted. References listed in alphabetical order are not acceptable. Journal references should include authors (last name, initials), article title, publication, volume, page numbers, and year published. Only the first word of the title should be capitalized. Book references should lisst authors, chapter title, book title with each word capitalized, page numbers referred to, editors' last names and initials, city, name of publishing company, and year published.

Manuscripts are edited to conform with the style of CONTEMPORARY SURGERY. Galley proofs will be sent to the principal author for approval prior to publication. An honorarium is paid on publication. Authors are legally responsible for all statements made.
